WASHINGTON, D. C. 20530

CHARGE NO. _____

The Court charges you gentlemen of the jury that even though the killing was not justifiable, yet, if from all the evidence you have a reasonable doubt as to whether it was done with malice and premeditation, the Defendant could not be convicted of murder.

Givens
J. W. Stare
Judge

CHARGE NO. _____

The Court charges the jury that the intent to kill must be present before the Defendant may be convicted of any crime above manslaughter in the second degree, and if you find from the evidence that the Defendant was only guilty of firing his gun in an unlawful manner, and without the intent to kill and without a depraved mind, then the highest crime of which you can convict him is manslaughter in the second degree.
