Figure 1 is a scatter plot with 'Days since start of outbreak' on the x-axis (ranging from 0 to 100) and 'Number of cases' on the y-axis (ranging from 0 to 100). The data points are represented by small circles. The plot shows a rapid increase in cases from day 0 to day 20, reaching a peak of approximately 90 cases. After day 20, the number of cases decreases sharply, reaching a low of about 10 cases by day 40. From day 40 to day 100, the number of cases remains relatively stable, fluctuating between 10 and 20.

Figure 1. The effect of the number of iterations on the accuracy of the proposed algorithm. The accuracy is measured by the relative error of the solution. The number of iterations is varied from 10 to 100. The accuracy of the solution is improved as the number of iterations increases. The accuracy of the solution is approximately 10⁻⁶ for 100 iterations.

Figure 1 is a scatter plot with 'Number of children in the household' on the x-axis and 'Number of children in the neighborhood' on the y-axis. Both axes range from 0 to 10. The plot contains numerous data points represented by small circles. A dashed diagonal line from (0,0) to (10,10) represents the identity line. Most points are clustered below this line, indicating that the number of children in the neighborhood is generally higher than in the household. There are a few points above the line, particularly at higher household counts.
