Figure 1. The structure of the proposed model. The model is designed to predict the probability of a node being a seed node in a network. The model takes as input a network graph G and a set of nodes S . The graph G is represented by an adjacency matrix A and a node feature matrix X . The set of nodes S is represented by a binary vector \mathbf{s} . The model consists of two main components: a graph convolutional layer (GCL) and a fully connected layer (FCL). The GCL takes the graph G and the node features X as input and produces a set of node features H . The FCL takes the node features H and the binary vector \mathbf{s} as input and produces the final output \mathbf{y} , which represents the probability of a node being a seed node.
