The figure shows four schematic representations of intermolecular interactions between polymer chains:

- (a) Hydrophobic interaction: Two polymer chains are shown with wavy lines representing hydrophobic groups. Arrows point from these groups towards each other, indicating an attractive force.
- (b) Electrostatic interaction: One chain has a positive charge (+) and the other has a negative charge (-). An arrow points from the positive charge to the negative charge, indicating attraction.
- (c) Dipole-dipole interaction: Each chain has two partial charges, δ^+ and δ^- . Arrows show the positive end of one dipole pointing towards the negative end of the other, indicating attraction.
- (d) Hydrogen bond: A hydrogen atom (H) is bonded to a nitrogen atom (N) on one chain and a fluorine atom (F) on another chain. Dashed lines represent the hydrogen bonds between the N-H group and the F atom, and between the F atom and another N-H group.
