

Bloch
Alex. Dry Goods Company, a Corporation.

vs.

J. A. Havard.

Comes the plaintiff and moves the Court ~~in~~ for an order of sale ~~under~~ of the personal property levied on under attachment on the grounds that the cost of keeping said property is very great, as they are now in a rented storehouse, and it will cost too much to pay rent for the housing of said property for the next six months until Court convenes in November next, and also because said property will deteriorate very much in value before the next term of Court. The property levied on under said attachment is the same as described in said annexed description.

W. H. Hawkins

Attorney for Plaintiff, the movant.

6/2/21

Granted June 2/921

John D. Ligon
Judge

st of property levied on in the case of Alex. Bloch Dry Goods Co.

J. A. Havard.

pair tennis, shoes; 26 pair of men's shoes; 21 pr. women's shoes;
1 pair children's shoes; 34 pair children hose; 6 pr. men's hose; 6 children sweaters; 10 pair children's union suits; 8 mens undershirts;
1 ladies vests; 7 mens B. V. D. undershirts; 3 pr. mens overalls; 6 ys caps; 2 ladies' shirt waists; 27 pocket books; 1 ladies hat; 5 ombs and brushes in boxes; 4 mens blue shirts; 2 boys hats; 4 boxes of shoe polish; 1 box safety pins; 11 baby capes ; 6 spools of ribbon;
6 card boards of lace; 5 belts; 4 boxes of handkerchiefs; 5 neckties;
box of buttons; 4 show cases; 2 doz. half gallon fruit jars; 3 doz.
qt. fruit jars; 2 buggy whips; 2 doll carts; 2 toy autoplanes; $\frac{1}{2}$ case of laundry soap; 5 granite boilers; 2 coffee pots; 2 glass water sets;
7 plates; 1 vase; 6 small glass lamps; 14 cob pipes; 2 rolls of oil cloth.