Dear Mr. Angle:

Thank you very much for your letter of October 27th.

It is difficult to understand how a man in your position could ask me to deduct $30.00 from your invoice and recover same by deducting a like amount from the payroll check of Lee Savage. This is not only a violation of good business principles but could place me in an embarrassing position if Lee Savage refused to accept the deduction.

In case you have not been brought up to date, Lee Savage informs me that he has contacted an attorney and from here on the collection of your account with him lies in the hands of the court. That is unless you decide to settle same on an agreeable basis.

I am returning the papers attached to your above referred to letter and assure you that I am not interested in any of the figures or any conversation concerning same. I have enough problems of my own without worrying abouts Lee Savage's. Please be assured I am not trying to be critical or antagonistic but I am not concerned about any transaction which the aforementioned employee my negotiate.

Yours very truly,

Walter O. Poser
